

TAFT SENDS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS TODAY

PRESIDENT MAKES RECOMMENDATIONS TO CONGRESS FOR LEGISLATION TO BE ENACTED AT SHORT SESSION.

APPROPRIATION ASKED

Rivers and Harbors Congress Recommends Annual Appropriation for Waterways Improvements—Immigration Bill, Waterways Congress.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—President Taft's principal recommendations in his message to congress today, were: The plan of currency reform outlined by the monetary commission. Amendment to the law to lessen the penalty when corporations inadvertently disobey the corporation tax law.

Congressional approval of plan of army reorganization prepared by the war college last spring.

The passage of the militia pay roll bill increasing compensation to militia in the field.

Citizenship without statehood for Porto Rico.

Regulation of water power grants so that navigable streams might be improved by water power.

Elevation of Col. Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal to a major generalship.

A return to the policy of two battalions a year by the appropriation for three battalions this year.

Authority to the United States supreme court to make rules of procedure in common law cases in federal courts to expedite and lessen the cost of litigation.

He disapproved the following: Autonomy and independence in eight years for the Philippines.

Amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law.

WILL ASK SENATE TO EXPEL WARREN

Senator Francis E. Warren.

A determined effort is to be made during the short congress session to bring about the impeachment of Senator Francis E. Warren of Wyoming. Warren is charged with "flagrantly violating the act of congress prohibiting the fencing of government land."

Some years ago E. B. Linnen, a special inspector of the interior department, was sent to Wyoming to make a thorough investigation of charges against the Warren Live Stock company, of which Senator Warren is the principal owner. The inspector found that the company had illegally included nearly 50,000 acres of government land. His report has not yet been acted upon in the upper house.

The president made no recommendation for tariff revision stating that he would leave that subject to the incoming congress.

An annual congressional appropriation of at least fifty million dollars for waterways improvement was recommended in a resolution adopted today at the closing session of the ninth annual convention of the National Rivers and Harbors congress. Another resolution urged the creation by congress of a department of public works of which corps of army engineers would be a part.

The waterways congress also passed a resolution congratulating congress upon its grant of immunity through the recently enacted Panama canal law from tolls upon ships engaged in our coast-wise trade and upon the protection to water born commerce afforded by said law against railway ownership or control of water lines.

Officers were re-elected as follows: President, Representative Joseph E. Randall, Louisiana; secretary-treasurer, S. A. Thompson, Indiana; sergeant-at-arms, John J. Martin, Missouri. The congress closed later with a reception to the delegates in the East Room of the White House by President Taft.

Immigration Bill.

Early action in the house on the Burnett immigration bill prescribing an literacy test was predicted today by Chairman Burnett of the immigration committee who announced that the rules committee was prepared to bring in a special rule under which the bill could be passed, when it would not interfere with appropriation bill. He asserted that at least 25 of the members of the house were pledged to vote for the measure.

"We're going to revise the tariff from sugar to zinc," said Majority Leader Underwood at the White House today. He said the meeting of the ways and means committee of the house scheduled for next week would be held merely to determine when hearings should begin when a full opportunity to be heard will be given every interested affected. Mr. Underwood talked with President Taft, but not about the tariff.

Representative Bartlett to strike a $2,000 civil service item from the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill as a protest against President Taft's recent order placing about 36,000 fourth class postmasters in the classified service failed in the house today after a heated debate. Representative Mann challenged the democratic members to pass the resolution "and place themselves on record for the spoils system."

TYPHOID FEVER AS A MENACE TO LIFE

Dr. McLaughlin of Public Health Service Discusses Disease at Life Insurance Meeting.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Dec. 6.—One hundred and seventy-five thousand cases of typhoid fever annually in this country could be prevented by campaign of education, with an annual saving of 16,200 lives, in the opinion of Dr. Allen J. McLaughlin of the United States Public Health Service, who spoke today in an address before the sixth annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents in New York. Dr. McLaughlin declared:

"That the economic loss caused by typhoid fever in this country is $100,000,000 a year.

"That in 50 of the largest American cities the typhoid fever death rate averaged 25 persons per 100,000 population as against 5.6 persons per 100,000 population for 33 leading cities of Northern Europe;

"That in 1909 there were more cases of typhoid fever in the United States than there were cases of plague in India;

"That every case of typhoid fever was due to somebody's ignorance or carelessness.

In part Dr. McLaughlin said:

"The Average Rate.

"Twenty deaths per 100,000 probably represent two hundred cases of typhoid fever. Suppose 200 cases of Asiatic cholera occurred in any American city of 100,000 population. Would not strenuous activity be displayed for the eradication of the scourge? Although the mortality rate of typhoid fever is lower than that of cholera, yet typhoid fever is transmissible in more ways, is more expensive in its lingering course, and more disastrous in its sequel than Asiatic cholera.

"The mental attitude toward typhoid ever displayed by many physicians and especially health officers is scarcely more commendable. Their complacency in the face of typhoid fever rates above twenty deaths annually per 100,000 population, is difficult to explain. If the rate is below twenty, many municipal officials are inclined to be satisfied with this rate, as it is low compared with less fortunate cities.

Dr. McLaughlin then compared the typhoid fever death rate of fifteen large Northern European cities with fifteen of the largest American cities in 1910 as follows: European cities:—Edinburgh, 1.3 per 100,000; Munich, 1.4; Stockholm 1.8; Dresden 2.2; Antwerp 2.3; Berlin 2.9; London 3.3; Copenhagen 3.6; Vienna 3.8; Liverpool 3.9; Belfast 3.9; Birmingham 3.9; Hamburg 4.1; Lyons 4.4; Paris 5.6; American cities:—Cincinnati 8.8 per 100,000; Boston 11.3; Jersey City 11.5; New York 11.3; Newark 12.1; Chicago 13.7; St. Louis 14.9; Philadelphia 17.5; Cleveland 17.9; Buffalo 20.0; Detroit 23.0; Washington 23.2; Pittsburgh 27.8; Milwaukee 45.7; Minneapolis 53.7.

"In 1909 there were more cases of typhoid in the United States than there were cases of plague in India, in spite of the fact that India's population is twice and one-half times that of the United States," said Dr. Laighlin. "From January, 1907, to October, 1911, there occurred in Russia, 283,684 cases of Asiatic cholera. This included the appalling epidemic of 1910. According to a conservative estimate there occurred in the United States during the same period one million and a quarter cases of typhoid fever, or more than four cases of typhoid fever in the United States for every case of cholera in Russia.

"No single measure in reducing typhoid fever on a large scale approaches the effect of substituting a safe for a polluted water supply. Every case of typhoid fever is due to somebody's ignorance or carelessness. Now in regard to carelessness, or criminal negligence, the punishment should fit the crime, but if ignorance the remedy is not punishment but education. It is precisely in this matter of education that your association can achieve the greatest good. The educational campaign must be directed against improper disposal of sewage, impure milk supplies, flies, uncontrolled cases of typhoid, filthy personal habits of individuals, and above all, against contaminated public water supplies."

FIGHTING METHODS OF UNION VIOLENT

Is Charge Made by Government in Cross-Examination of Defendant in Dynamite Conspiracy Trial.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 6.—Violent methods of fighting non-union works in which Herbert S. Hockin acted as an "advance agent" of McNamara's "dynamiting squad" were charged by the government in the cross examination of Murray L. Pennell, Springfield, Ill., a defendant, at the trial of the accused "bomb plotters" today. In connection with a letter which Pennell an official of the iron workers at Springfield, wrote to John J. McNamara, the national secretary of the union alleged that the inability of the local union men officials to unionize a job was followed by an appeal for aid and that a visit of Hockin was followed by an explosion. Pennell testified after he failed to unionize jobs in Springfield, he wrote to McNamara, "Send Hockin as soon as possible," but he asserted he wanted Hockin as a national organizer and not for dynamiting purposes.

He said Hockin failed to appear and on February 15, 1911, he again appealed to "hope and wait" cautioning Pennell to be more careful what he wrote to headquarters, for the Lord only knows who reads the mail that comes into this office. The witness said Hockin later arrived in Springfield. On March 8, an explosion there caused, $45,000 damages.

"What did Hockin's visit have to do with that explosion?" asked district attorney Miller.

"None whatever so far as I know," answered Pennell. "I knew nothing of the explosion."

"Well it was the job he had been trying to unionize, wasn't it?"

"Yes."

Chewing gum caused a brief interruption of the trial. District Attorney Miller noticed Pennell was chewing while testifying and protested to the court.

"Take that chewing gum out of your mouth," demanded Federal Judge Anderson.

Pennell apparently gave no heed to the order.

"Well why don't you take it out of your mouth?" asked the court.

"I have," answered Pennell. "I swallowed it."

Charles B. Baum a Minneapolis former member of the iron workers executive board was the next witness.

The editorial follows in part:

"What passed between George W. Perkins and Theodore Roosevelt on the evening of Aug. 7, when Perkins gave the mimeographed copies of the platform that had been adopted by the resolutions committee and the convention, and discovered that it contained his pet aversion—an anti-trust plank 'with teeth in it'?"

"What discussion, if any, did Theodore Roosevelt have with Senator Joseph M. Dixon, his campaign manager, after Perkins and Dixon found the anti-trust plank in the platform as adopted?"

"What has Gifford Pinchot secretary of the resolutions committee, and in charge of its records, to say to Oct King Davis, whose hasty 'explanation' charges some one with 'overlooking' a plank 'which the resolutions committee had adopted'?"

"Who was it, that first suggested that the paragraph of Roosevelt's 'confession of faith' pointing out the advantages of big business combinations be submitted for the eliminated anti-trust plank?"

"Why did the supporters of Roosevelt who knew about this tampering with the covenant long before election day—why did they keep silent? Why did they tell the voters about their discovery?"

HOLDS REASSESSMENT CHARGE IS ILLEGAL

City Attorney W. H. Dougherty Files Opinion to Effect That City Need Not Stand Expense of Work.

That the state law requiring cities to pay the expense of their reassessment by employees of the Tax Commission is unconstitutional and that the city council of Janesville need not pay the sum of $2851.56, assessed against it for the recent reassessment is the opinion of City Attorney W. H. Dougherty, submitted in a report to the council, filed with the city clerk late yesterday afternoon. Mr. Dougherty submitted the opinion at the request of the council and it will probably be considered and adopted at the next meeting.

In support of his contention that the charge for the work of reassessment in Janesville is illegal, the city attorney states that the reassessment was never demanded by the city as a corporation but by a private citizen, and furthermore that the city has never formally ratified or approved the work of the tax commission. He does not question the right of the state to provide by general law for a revaluation of any taxing district within its borders, that right having been upheld by the supreme court. But this decision, in his opinion is based upon the proposition that those who make the reassessment are the agents of the state, and therefore should be paid for their services by the state. If the tax commission can charge a city for its services, then why cannot railroad commission, the state board of health, the industrial commission, or any other agency apportion the cost of its services in the same manner? The same principle would seem to be involved if the militia should be called out to preserve order in Janesville and the city should be taxed for their service.

It is thought by the city attorney that it will not be necessary for the city to engage in expensive litigation to settle the controversy and that it is possible to have the attorney general arrange to have a court decision submitted at slight expense. He believes that the item of $155.05 charged against the city for interest is indefensible as the claim has never been presented to the city, nor has the city been given an opportunity to pay it, including interest, the total claim against the city is $3006.06.

Williams conducted the services.

Mrs. Mary Paterson.
Last services for Mrs. Mary Paterson were held at the home Wednesday afternoon, the Rev. J. W. Laughlin officiating. The pall bearers were James Shearer, Henry Rogers, Wm. Blair, Andrew Scott, Chas. Cleland and Miller Calkins. Interment was made in Oak Hill cemetery.

George M. Raught.
George M. Raught, a pioneer resident of Kaukauna, and brother of Joseph A. and William Raught of this city, also father of C. E. Raught, publisher of the Kaukauna Times, and of M. A. Raught, Times office foreman, died November 20, aged 63 years, seven months, and twenty-one days. Mr. Raught enlisted in the Union army at the age of seventeen years, becoming a member of Battery C, First Wisconsin Heavy Artillery, under Captain John R. Davis. He was honorably discharged from service September 21, 1865, at Nashville, Tennessee. Word of the death of Mr. Raught was received too late for any of the Janesville relatives to attend the funeral.

WRITE PLAINLY ON ONE SIDE OF PAPER

Santa Claus Letters Increase in Number—Many Arrive by Each Mail.

There is no doubt that Santa's mail bag will be well filled by the seventeenth of the present month when it starts on its mysterious journey to the old Saint's home at the North Pole. Every mail brings in missives for the friend of childhood and the early response to his appeal for letters shows the interest. Write plainly on one side of the paper only and it mailed to Santa, care of the Gazette office, put a two-cent stamp on the envelope. The letters can be mailed or left at the Gazette office and they will all be cared for.

The troops were divided in three divisions, under Major Reno, Capt. Benteen and Gen. Custer. Custer was to attack the center, and Reno and Benteen the flanks. Benteen became lost in the hills and Reno failed. Unconscious of his loss of support, CUSTER LED HIS COMMAND INTO THE VERY JAWS OF DEATH.

Flattering to Courier.
When Beatrice of England was eight years old she made some cakes and offered them to Lady Ely and others of the court at Windsor. They refused. "Very well," she said, much annoyed at their refusal, "as Dr. Stanley is not here, I shall give them to the donkey!" Dr. Stanley, to whom this doubtful compliment was paid, was, of course, the celebrated Dean Stanley, who was a great friend and favorite of the young princess.

Bob Storer, left tackle, may be named as Harvard's next football captain. He is a member of a prominent Boston family.

Tom McCarty, Los Angeles fight promoter, is anxious for Johnny Kibane to go to the coast February 22 and fight Johnny Dundee at Vernon. A good purse has been offered and the featherweight champ thinks he will go.

Now that he's champ, Willie Ritchie will take the footlights for a time and then rest. He is very greatly in need of rest. He fought Mandot

Hugh Jennings says the lambasting the Philadelphia Athletics gave the Cubans this fall confirms what he said that there was no reason for the islanders to beat any good American lot of players who would keep in condition. Heretofore, says Hugh, all the trips taken to Cuba have been nothing but joy journeys, with no great effort to play ball.

Jim Flynn and Luther McCarty, who are to fight twenty rounds at the Vernon, Cal., arena on December 10, have both had a very hard time finding sparring partners. Heavyweights seem to be rather scarce. Al Palmer will fight the winner on January 1 and is already training in Los Angeles.

With Ed Dugdale owner at Seattle and Joe McGinnity, owner at Tacoma, Northwestern league fans will next year witness the spectacle of old-time battery mates rivals for the pennant. McGinnity and Dugdale made up the star battery for the Peoria team in the old Western Association twenty year ago.

SPORTSMEN DISCUSS GAME LAW CHANGES

Favor Spring Open Season for Ducks and Open Season for Quail—Both Opposed by Game Warden.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Dec. 6.—The Wisconsin Fish and Game Protective and Propagation league held a meeting today for discussion of proposed legislation affecting sportsmen. One proposal certain to come up is an open season for the shooting of ducks in the spring, and an open season for the shooting of quail. This measure is supported by the La Crosse County Hunting and Fishing association, which planned to advocate it today.

State Game Warden John A. Shotts in an interview prior to the meeting expressed his opposition to both proposals. Spring shooting of ducks and quail, he declared, is disastrous to the full propagation of the birds. The principal argument of the La Crosse hunters who favor it, he said, is the fact that Illinois allows it, and that the birds flying southward from Wisconsin fall prey to Illinois hunters. Warden Shotts contends that the preservation of the birds in the spring means more to hunters in Wisconsin generally than the temporary gratification of some hunters' desire to shoot.

Prof. John P. Bird of La Crosse is president of the league, which was formed at a meeting in the capitol last year.

Interesting Match With Strong Outside Team Will Be Played at Hockett Alley Tonight.

Five local bowlers who have the highest averages in the local bowling league for the present season will meet the team of Juneau bowlers from Juneau, Wis., at the Hockett alleys this evening. DIRECTORS TO HOLD MEETING NEXT WEEK

Directors of Y. M. C. A. Will Meet to Discuss Proposed Remodelling Of Building.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Young Men's Christian association, to consider the matter of the remodelling of the association's building will be held sometime next week, upon the return of President P. F. Lewis. Mr. Lewis at present is in the East, having been summoned there on business, but is expected to return tomorrow night or Sunday and the meeting of the directors will be called shortly after his return.

Meanwhile the secretary, J. C. Kline and the workers under his direction are continuing the campaign for subscriptions that was begun sometime before. Mr. Kline was called away from the city, about three weeks ago. He has taken up the work again, and will push it until the required sum has been subscribed for. Just before Mr. Kline left for Indiana, he and Mr. Lewis secured subscriptions amounting to one thousand dollars, and the fund to be used in remodelling work is increasing nicely, but the amount thus far secured, is not large enough to insure the work, and a number more of large subscriptions must be solicited before the work can be started.

DIVIDED SENTIMENT.

One of the results of the meeting held Thursday afternoon of persons interested in the recall of the present city officials is that the retail liquor dealers are divided in sentiment as to the proposition. Thus far but a limited number have signed the petitions circulated and some have expressed themselves as hopeful that the matter could be adjusted without the necessity of such radical measures as proposed by the promoters of the scheme.

The men actively engaged in the movement are men who have a personal grievance, either through the loss of trade, by the enforcement of law, or because of the fact that they may not be able to secure licenses another year.

In speaking of saloons, it is perfectly natural to treat the business as alike bad, or at best as a necessary evil, but the fact remains that there are just as many classes of men engaged in the saloon business as in any other line of trade.

The men who are lawless, and who openly defy all regulation, are in the minority. These are the men who have no right to a license, and who are likely to be retired from business when the number of licenses is reduced.

The great majority of men in the saloon business respect the law, when assured of the fact that there are no favorites. In the state of Iowa, where regulations are very strict, the laws enforce themselves, and this is true throughout the South, where in many cities the closing hour is seven o'clock.

The trouble with Janesville, is that it is supporting more saloons than the size of the town warrants, and competition has developed all sorts of devices to increase the revenue. Many of these devices have been contrary to law, but they had been practiced so long that established custom had legalized them.

The uniform and impartial enforcement of law is never burdensome to men who respect the law, and there are plenty of men engaged in the saloon business in Janesville who would cheerfully comply with wholesome regulations. This class of men are not calling for a recall.

A PITIALE OBJECT.

Some one said, a time ago, that the most pitiable object in the world is an old man who has nothing to show for his age but his years.

The truthfulness of the statement is worth emphasizing, for the roadway of life is lined with old men, who are more or less dependent, and whose principal asset is a memory of better days.

But little can be done for this class of derelicts. They have had their opportunity, and in most cases might have gained a competency, had they so determined.

They should be object lessons, however, for the new generation, traveling the same road, with the same possible destiny staring in the face.

The man who looks ahead at all must necessarily take the future into account. He is just as sure to reach an age when vitality is weakened and earning capacity lessened, as time is to pass.

If dependent for employment there may come a time when he finds himself out of work, and, as is often the case, if gray hairs have made their appearance, nobody wants him, if a younger man is to be had.

These are the cold facts which confront every life after it has passed the meridian, and they should not be ignored. The plan of every life should combine ambition and economy.

It matters not how steady the employment, or how liberal the income, unless something is laid aside every year for the rainy day, which is sure to follow.

The opportunities of life come to us in the early stages of the journey, and they are rare after middle life. There are plenty of men in business today, who would find it difficult to make another start, if overtaken by misfortune, and if dependent on others for employment, a very moderate salary would be the reward.

More important than pleasure, or anything else is knowledge of the fact that we are laying a foundation for an independent future, when we reach the age of dependence.

CHRISTMAS FIRE HAZARDS.

Christmas and its joys should not be allowed to blind men to the ordinary rules of safety for the protection of the home and the lives of the family. And yet at holiday time parents who try to keep their children free from even the possibility of danger will install in the heart of their homes, where it is sure to be the center of attraction for the little ones, the most inflammable thing that ever enters it—the ordinary evergreen Christmas tree. While it grows more dry and dangerous in the warm rooms they drape it with cotton for snow, tissue paper loops and tinsel for decorations, stick candles all over it, hang up toys that every child will grab for, and then trust to luck and providence for safety from a hazard that may prove as dangerous and as deadly as a rattlesnake or an open keg of gunpowder. Just to play fair and take his share of the chances pater familias often surrounds himself with pillows, puts on cotton hair and whisks and makes himself more of a menace than a help in case a fire should start. And fires do start, thousands of them every holiday season. Firemen look forward to a run of Christmas tree fires just as they did to Fourth of July fires before the Sane Fourth movement put an end to them in many places. Why not a Sane Christmas as well as a Sane Fourth? Why should the children's festival be made the means of destroying hundreds of lives and thousands of homes? Use little electric lights instead of candles, asbestos instead of cotton, non-combustible decorations instead of inflammables, and then watch the tree with the utmost care, especially when the children are around it. It's better to be safe than sorry, especially with the little ones at Christmas time.

It may be a little early for this sort of a warning, but it is worth heeding, in our Christmas planning. Give the little folks a good time but don't take any chances on fire accidents.

Evidently that recall petition is going to be filed after all. Suppose it does carry and we have a new election. What good would it do the radical element to win? They could not change the present ordinances as they merely conform with state laws and should they be violated it would be easy for any citizen to swear out a warrant and see that they were enforced.

Already the lightning rods of ambitious politicians for the Janesville postoffice job have appeared over the horizon despite the fact the present capable official has two years more of his present term to run. Perhaps he may be appointed again after all as this district is republican and there is such a thing as senatorial courtesy.

Wisconsin is a negative quantity in national politics. With a democratic presidential nominee carrying the state by a good majority, a Bull Moose governor being elected, two republican senators and numerous republican congressmen and a state senate and assembly, it is doubtful if it can be classed as a democratic stronghold.

In the old days no one would think of starting building a house or a building at the opening of winter, but in these days of rush and hurry the weather or seasons make no difference and buildings go up like magic, regardless of snow or ice.

The loss of the "blood money" of the disorderly women to Janesville is what seems to be sticking in the throats of many of the signers of the recall petition.

One manufacturer has stated that he lost the service of a skilled workman in his factory because they could not get their drinks on Sunday. This is a poor excuse for their leaving Janesville with its many advantages.

This is the time of the year that the spirit of good fellowship should prevail and personal difference be buried. One of the essentials for a merry, happy Christmas is the spirit of giving and following the bible teaching that it is more blessed to give than receive.

Do your Christmas shopping early so as to help the merchants and clerks and not leave everything to the last minute.

MRS. HENRY WELLS DIES AT FOOTVILLE

Aged Resident Who Had Lived in County For 47 Years Passes Away Suddenly.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Footville, Dec. 6.—Mrs. Henry Wells for forty-seven years a resident of Rock county, died yesterday afternoon at four o'clock at her home two and three-fourth miles west of this village. She was taken ill Thursday morning with neuralgia of the heart and lived but a few hours.

Eliza Kettle was born in Kent, England, Nov. 7, 1833, and was married in 1855. The same fall she came to America with her husband and settled in the western part of Rock county, where she has since made her home. Her husband passed away four years ago and since then her son, Charles and family have lived on the farm with her.

She leaves three sons and one daughter: William, John, Charles and Mrs. Anna Quinn, all residing in this vicinity. She also leaves nineteen grandchildren and nine great grandchildren. There were also three sisters and four brothers.

Funeral services will be held from the home Sunday morning at ten o'clock and at eleven o'clock from the Christian church at Footville.

Explained.
"My husband is always cracking up the virtues of his first wife," said Mrs. Hinkley, with a sigh. "Though as a matter of fact they got on very badly."

"Perhaps he understands her better now that she has been translated," said Mrs. Wiggs. —Harper's Weekly.

CREAM

BAKING POWDER

A pure, healthful, Cream of Tartar Baking Powder

When buying an article of food you are entitled to know exactly what you are buying—its quality and ingredients.

If this information is refused don't buy it. Some of the low grade baking powders are advertised, but the ingredients of the powders are scrupulously concealed.

A housekeeper would not use a baking powder containing alum if she knew it.

It is well when buying to examine the label on the can. Unless it shows the ingredient cream of tartar, don't buy it.

Dr. Price's baking powder is absolutely free from alum.

Retort Imperative.

Fenelon had repeatedly boned Richelieu for subscriptions to various charitable schemes and the cardinal always refused to loosen up. One day Fenelon was telling him that he had been looking at his (Richelieu's) new picture. "Did you ask it for a subscription?" inquired the cardinal. "No; I saw there was no chance," replied Fenelon; "it looked as much like you."

Time's Changes.

Among what may be described as manufactured jokes the following from an exchange is an ingenious specimen: "If Tennyson had lived in my suburb," said paterfamilias the other night as he ruefully contemplated his gas bill, "he would never have written, 'Honor the Light Brigade! honor the charge they made! But perhaps gas companies had consciences in his day.'"

SAMUEL WRIGHT DIED EARLY THIS MORNING

Was Ninety-Two Years Old and Had Resided in Janesville For Fifty-nine Years—Born in England.

Samuel Wright, one of the best known of the surviving pioneers of Janesville, died at the home of his son, George S. Wright, 413 Park avenue, at two o'clock this morning, at the age of ninety-two years. He had lived in Janesville for fifty-nine years, and saw it grow from a tiny hamlet to its present size. Mr. Wright was born in Cambridgeshire, England. He came to the United States sixty-one years ago, settling at East Troy. After living there for a year and a half he came to Janesville, where he has since resided. His business was that of a mason contractor, and many buildings erected in Janesville were built in whole or in part under his direction. Mr. Wright was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal church and a faithful attendant at its services. Most of the friends of his active years long ago preceded him to the Beyond but there are many among the younger generations of Janesville people who knew and esteemed him. Surviving him are three sons, John and George T. of this city and William of Austin, and two daughters, Mrs. Mate Horn of this city, and Miss Ida Wright of Kansas. Announcement of funeral arrangements will be made later.

PRISONER HAD HIS MONEY WELL HIDDEN ON PERSON

George Uhler Surprises Police by Digging up Six Dollars With Which to Pay His Fine.

Men placed under arrest are usually carefully searched and their money and other belongings kept at the station office until they are dismissed from custody, but occasionally one has his money so carefully secreted that it escapes the notice of the officers. This was the case with George Uhler, who paid guilty to a charge of drunkenness in the municipal court this morning. No money or not enough to pay his fine had been found on his person, and as soon as sentence was pronounced the officer led him back to the cell room. Just as he was about to be locked up Uhler stated he wanted to pay his fine and quickly turning around, drew from a secret place six dollars in bills. Uhler's money was at once accepted and he was given his liberty.

Morris Beam, a sugar factory laborer, arrested at the car barns on Eastern Avenue last night, after he refused to leave the place, also paid guilty to being found intoxicated, and paid a fine of $3 and costs.

REPORT ON TOBACCO ACREAGE IN STATE

Total of 33,531 Acres Raised in State

In 1912—Dane and Rock Counties in Lead.

A total of 33,531 acres of tobacco which yield, it is estimated 125,000 cases, were raised in Wisconsin this year according to figures published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Dane county is easily the leader in the amount of the crop grown with 14,407 acres against 5,590 for Rock county which is second.

In Rock county the towns of Fulton, and Porter lead all others each with an acreage bordering on the 1,000 mark. Other townships well to the front are Harmony, Center, Janesville and Rock.

The figures for the various tobacco raising counties are as follows:

Counties	Acres.
Barron	63
Buffalo	13
Chippewa	404
Clark	6
Columbia	2036
Crawford	2248
Dane	14407
Dunn	341
Eau Claire	31
Grant	217
Green	251
Jackson	480
Jefferson	209
Juneau	73
La Crosse	532
Monroe	28
Pierce	479
Richland	5590
Rock	10
St. Croix	4
Sauk	453
Trempealeau	5488
Vernon	15
Winnebago	22
Wood	23531

What will be most noticeable in these figures is the steady increase in acreage of some of the northern counties, notably Monroe, Jackson, Chippewa, Dunn and Barron.

It will be observed that Dane and Rock counties produce nearly two-thirds of the total tobacco grown in the state; Dane county, of course, leads them all with the four townships of Dunkirk, Christiana, Pleasant Springs and Albion having the largest acreage.

MADISON SELECTION PUTS EDLER ON ALL-STATE TEAM

Another all-state team has been picked by H. Meade Durbrow of Madison. Edler of Janesville is represented on this eleven as a halfback while Falter does not appear on the list. Falter is a favorite on two of the three teams picked while Edler seems to have the place on the third all-state selection. Madison, Merrill, Janesville, Eau Claire and Oshkosh are represented. The men who are credited on this team are as follows:

Center—Shields, Madison.
Right guard—Cheney, Eau Claire.
Right tackle—Wenzel, Oshkosh.
Right end—Strum, La Crosse.
Quarterback—Nelson, Madison.
Left halfback—Edler, Janesville.
Right halfback—Simpson, Oshkosh.
Fullback, Bondi, Madison.

Easy Canning of Fruit.

Instead of canning berries and fruits wholesale and exhausting yourself for a whole day at a time over a hot stove, did you ever try putting up a few jars at a time by the heat of the stove as you cook dinner? In this way the canning can be made merely incidental to cooking the regular meals and the shelves will fill rapidly under the system. Jams and jellies in smaller quantities, too, have a richer flavor.

Puzzle for Pluvius.

The farmers on one side of the Blue mountains are praying for rain, while those on the other side are praying just as fervently for a drought. It must be a rather delicate undertaking even for Providence to please everybody.

Unsympathetic St. Paul's. St. Paul's cathedral is to me the least genial of cathedrals, the least kindly. It is neither tenderness nor mystery. I would not call it exactly hard and churlish; it is simply so much noble masonry without sympathy.—Speaker.

The Relief Expedition

If any one falls downstairs or gets run over on the street or encounters any mishap necessitating instant succor Crapple is always the unfortunate individual on the spot. Possessing a troublesome kindness of heart, he cannot manage the rapid melting around a corner that scares others, so he hies to the rescue.

This being so, it was entirely in the order of things that, glancing from his office window across the court one blustering hot afternoon, he should see a man seize hold of a girl as she crumpled before her typewriter and fell. The man, noting Crapple, beckoned violently for him to come over. So Crapple hastened over.

"I was just going by the open door," the man told Crapple, "and I saw her topple over—there isn't a soul here. What'll I do?"

"Put ice on her wrists and temples and I'll find a doctor," said the capable Crapple.

There was no physician in that building, so he rushed out and headed for a building a block away. The girl was a slight little thing and she certainly looked desperately ill.

"Vot doctor?" asked the elevator man blandly to Crapple's inquiries. "Any doctor?" shouted the exasperated Crapple. "And take me to him, quick!"

Three doctors were not in and the fourth was deep in work. "See here," said the busy doctor. "You run across to the health department in the city hall and you can get a doctor for her for nothing!"

Crapple, mopping his forehead, hastened to the city hall. His face was purple and his collar was melted. Fedestrians in irritated surprise as they dragged along the street made way for the apparently insane man who was rushing along on that hot day. Only the memory of the limp little girl, who perhaps was dying back in the stifling office, spurred Crapple on, for he is a stout man and averse to violent exercise.

Crapple successively burst into and disorganized the marriage license bureau, the dog license department and a tax office before he finally reached the proper spot. By this time large streams of perspiration were galloping down his face and making furrows in the dust which he had accumulated on his countenance. He could only gasp.

"No, no!" he roared to the energetic young man who grabbed him and forced him into a chair and then called for ice and began jerking at his collar as he inquired soothingly where he felt worst. "I'm perfectly normal, but there's a girl prostrated by the heat in an office."

"Well," said the young man, severely, as he relaxed his hold on Crapple's collar, you should explain clearly what you want when you come in instead of wasting our time! Now, if you will go to the office on Market street—

"Market street be hanged!" said Crapple, violently. "Do you suppose this is a case of lingering illness and that next week will do?"

He dashed out, and missing an express elevator, got into the local. The elevator man stopped at each floor to exchange repartee with various friends. Each time before he started up again he paused to mop his forehead and murmur reproachfully that it was a mighty hot day. Once he went back two floors for some one with a big voice who howled accusingly after the vanishing elevator.

After Crapple at last reached the street he was so wet with perspiration that he looked as though he had just emerged from the lake. He stormed into another building where there were men of medicine and found one.

"What you should have done," said that individual, shaking his head, "was to phone for the police ambulance and have her taken to a hospital where her temperature would be properly reduced and the right sort of attention bestowed upon her. You'd better get the ambulance now and—"

"No," said Crapple with cold sarcasm, "I think I'd better go out and get a good, lively undertaker, for no doubt the girl passed away long ago. I'll just run back to the office and see!"

Fuming, bedraggled, hot and limp, Crapple tore back to the scene of disaster. He shrank from seeing that limp, hopeless little creature, now probably beyond all help.

The office seemed quite calm and two persons were busily at work. They seemed bewildered when Crapple begged to know the condition of the stricken girl. Presently the brow of one cleared.

"Oh, yes," he said. "Miss Lester did feel the heat a little, but she was well enough in a few minutes to go home. How did you happen to know about it?"

"Why," said Crapple, grimly, "I have a habit of soaking in information. Now, if you will direct me to a large chunk of ice I shall be infinitely obliged!"

Woman's Bank Account.

"John, didn't you tell me that all savings banks are run in practically the same way?"

"I believe I did. What's wrong, now?"

"Oh, nothing; only if they are all about the same, why did I have to go to a certain one today when I wanted to draw some money?"

The storm that was in the Mississippi valley yesterday has passed northeastward over Lake Michigan, and is now moving eastward over the lower lakes. It has been attended by rain throughout the eastern half of the country, and by gales in the lake region. The warm humid winds that marked its approach have given place to cold northerly winds. The change bringing a drop in temperature of 30 degrees or more throughout the North-west. The approach of another barometric depression through western Canada promises an early renewal of warmer weather. The barometer is high in the Plateau region, where fair and cold weather prevail in consequence.

HAD NO DULL TIME ON HER OCEAN TRIP

Mrs. Edward B. Alsop.

That there were no dull moments for Mrs. Edward B. Alsop, the gay, young wife of the aged millionaire, Alsop during their recent ocean trip from Europe, is vouched for by the passengers aboard the American liner President Grant. She evidently spent all her traveling allowance before reaching New York, for she gave a diamond ring to the chief steward as security for her champagne check. When the liner came alongside, she was discovered at the rail smoking a cigarette, hugging a gloomy Blenheim spaniel and offering to the dog's nostrils again and again her bouquet. Before her marriage Mrs. Alsop was Ella Pope Hull of Georgia.

At The Theatre

"THE THIRD DEGREE."
The United Play Company, will present Charles Klein's play, "The Third Degree" at Myers Theater Saturday, December 14, matinee and evening.

Mr. Klein is the author of the well known play, "The Lion and the Mouse," which was also produced by the United Play Company. While "The Lion and the Mouse" dealt with characters high in politics and speculative commerce, in "The Third Degree" the story is laid in New York and deals with men and women in the smart set and the methods of the to a barrel of trash and ran into the lobby of the theater yelling fire. The audience rose en masse and started for the exits. Miss Sherwood grasped the situation at a glance and went on with her lines and in a few moments quelled a panic that would undoubtedly result in a great loss of life had it not been for her presence of mind. As soon as the audience realized what had been done to quell the panic, a storm of applause arose and it was several minutes before Miss Sherwood could go on with the play. The morning following the occurrence, Mayor W. A. Jackson called on Miss police in wringing confessions of guilt through the sweating process of "The Third Degree."

J. FRANCIS CONNORS.
Born April 19, 1890, in Janesville, Wisconsin. At the age of eight, he commenced the study of music at St. Joseph's Convent, where he studied five years. He then continued under W. T. Thiele. In 1905 he went to Chicago and won by competition, partial and free scholarships respectively, in the piano department of the Chicago Musical College under Maurice Rosenfeld, the well known pianist, pedagogue and critic who for the past twenty-five years has been identified with the musical development of the middle west. At the same time, Mr. Connors took up the study of theory and history under Adolph Bruns and Felix Borowski. After winning gold medals in succession in 1909 and 1910, he won the Alexander H. Revell diamond medal in the post-graduate class. In 1911, unanimously awarding him title of "the best pianist" of his class. The degree of Bachelor of Music was conferred on him by Judge Richard S. Tuttle at the same time. He was then called to the faculty of the Sherwood School of Music where he taught one year, after which he joined the faculty of the Chicago Musical College, his "Alma Mater" where his services are in constant demand.

Mr. Connors will be heard in a recital at Myers Theater Thursday, December 12.

"THE THIEF."
Marion Sherwood, who plays the leading role in "The Thief," Henri Bernstein's great play which appears at the Myers Theater on Saturday, December 7, matinee and evening has the distinction of being one of the few women who has received the thanks of a city through the mayor of the place.

While playing in Arkadelphia, Ark., recently Miss Sherwood had an opportunity to prove herself a heroine. It was during the second act of the play which was being presented to a large audience. During the action of the play some boys in the alley set fire

Sherwood at her hotel and thanked her in behalf of the city for her part in saving many of the people of the town from serious injury and possibly death. In answering Mayor Jackson, Miss Sherwood said "Ah it was nothing—any level headed woman would have done the same thing under the circumstances. I saw that something had to be done and done quickly or a terrible catastrophe would have happened."

"THE GIRL AND THE DRUMMER."

The author of "The Girl and the Drummer" has seized the psychological moment and written a play of modern life, that is so direct as to be somewhat startling at times, and in the hands of a less skillful author, might go beyond the bounds set by the conventions. The story is one of a toll. A successful New York business man, who is also a moral pervert, visits a health resort in Colorado, and lures a young and trusting girl from the paths of rectitude. In seeking to redress her wrongs, she falls in love with a dashing young commercial traveler, and what is begun as a passing flirtation, develops into mutual love and in the final denouement, results in a tragedy for both.

The characters are drawn with consummate skill, the leading characters ring true to life. The comedy is keen and incisive, the situations are laid up to the most natural way, and what might be risqué lines, are treated in so delicate a manner as to serve as guiding light to mothers who have budding daughters ready to launch into the world of society.

The character of J. Burton Downs, is a typical New York man about town who regards all beautiful women as legitimate prey. The divorce question is frankly discussed in all its modern developments.

The play, while distinctly a comedy, and wrought on the lines of all successful comedy, rises in its climax to heights of the more serious drama. The company presenting this play, has been carefully selected and is strictly "au fait" as to artistic ability and personnel. The production of this play cannot fail to interest all, whether students of social problems, or merely seeking an evening's pleasure. "The Girl and the Drummer" will be seen at Myers Theater Tuesday, December 10.

Fads and Fashion

New York, Dec. 5.—The coming winter promises to be a great season for furs, which means, in view of the prevailing tendency to utter extravagance, that tremendous sums will be spent during the coming winter months for furs of every description. This winter's modes admit great variety in the lines and general character of the fur coats, and even the severely practical coat is no longer uniform, as it was a season or two ago. The full length coat has been obliged to share its popularity with the coat of five-eighths length, and many chic models are shorter still, while there are countless elegant fur wraps of the cape and mantlelet type.

Drapery has crept into the province of furs, and while of course having more limitations here than in frockdom it finds very charming expression in some of the lightest and supplest of the furs. Mole, for example, drapes very well. Fine baby lamb and caracul are easily handled, and even ermine can be made to take on graceful drapery lines.

The long, loose, straight fur coat, usually with collar of contrasting fur, is commonly chosen for motorizing and hard service, but the dress coat, when not draped, is likely to show its vintage by some one or two details. It is fairly sure to have front crossing and fastening well to the side. Sometimes it has a Russian air, but more often the fronts cross diagonally and are finished by a big collar or by some sort of rolling collar echoing the lines so popular in the frock collars and separate collars of lingerie, lace or net.

Certain short draped coats of supple fur rounding away in the front are launched by extremists who are pushing the pectop silhouette, but they are by no means graceful even for the slender woman and are not likely to be taken very seriously by the women of this country. Some Russian coats of half length or longer, button up the left front, close on the left shoulder and have high, close collars finished at the top by a narrow band of contrasting fur. A model of this type usually is loosely belted or girdled across the back, if not all around, and the model, while good looking if well worn, is becoming only to the exceptional woman.

Many of the new fur coats are made without collars for greater convenience in the wearing of separate neck furs. Linings are often of the handsome brocades, and in some of the most luxurious garments these linings are so rich in themselves that they add greatly to the cost of the coat.

Fur wraps and draped mantles are much in vogue, and are lovely if worn over velvet or plush frocks without other wrap or drawn about the shoulders when an evening coat or afternoon coat is discarded. They are made up in various furs but are particularly effective in ermine and, with some costumes, are admirable in mink.

The enormous straight scarfs are still liked and are very cleverly worn by some women who have the knack of adjusting them. If skillfully adjusted such a scarf may be substituted for a coat.

Street frocks, visiting frocks, house frocks, evening frocks, all call for fur trimmings and if discreetly used these fur trimmings greatly enhance the beauty of any costume. So many of the three-piece and two-piece costumes have fur about the throat that there is an unusual call for hat and muff sets without neckpieces to match, but often the fur trimming is kept away from the throat, so that separate furs or sets with neck pieces on suits may be worn, and sometimes the fur appears only in some one place on the costume, perhaps a band on the skirt bottom or on a turban.

The grays, particularly in the dark shades, are greatly liked. Taupes have been taken up too enthusiastically by the crowd to retain their prestige and are seen on every grade of costume, but common as the color now is, it has, in handsome materials, much cachet. The dark iron gray and gun metal too are models, though more trying than the taupe shades, and there are some lovely squirrel and pigeon grays which make attractive trimmings.

The browns are more popular than in many seasons past, and beautiful new shades have appeared which are hard to describe and to which no two manufacturers or salesmen give the same names. There are lovely tones in maroon and dead leaf and tete de negre and even seal, while among the light shades such as sable and burnt bread, etc., there is great and charming variety.

The feature in all the materials used for evening wear lies in the coloring. During the last five or six years most of the tints favored were vague in certain lights, as they were very subdued. Those recommended this season are frankly decided and most becoming. Excepting for girls, the majority of dancing and dinner frocks will have pointed trains made more or less long, according to the occasion. As many of the evening gowns are cut on Greek lines, the skirts, in this instance, finish in a narrow point barely exceeding half a yard, and some are even shorter. The train conceived in this manner gives a pretty finish to the skirt, and a becoming line at the back, but does not impart dignity.

Coats and skirts of the simplest and most severe types, intended only for morning wear, are being carried out in very vivid shades of purple and crimson, colors which, by the way, are doubly effective in velours de laine, that fascinating fabric which is just now carrying all before it. Soft in texture as a suede glove, velvet lours de laine is one of the most becoming materials imaginable, and it is equally effective when it is seen in plain colors, and when it is woven with wide or narrow raised stripes in some contrasting shades, when the effect given at a little distance is almost that of the richest and softest corduroy velvet.

Lovely two-toned chameleon silk brocaded in black is very smart for dressy street suits. One famous designer is using velvet closely dotted with small squares in yellow and emerald on what appears to be a dull gray background. On close inspection it proved to be a very fine, hair-line plaid in green and yellow on a white ground.

Very attractive dresses are made of black velvet. With them are worn long scarfs of fur or chiffon bordered with fur.

Sleeves in different material from any part of the dress are a novelty, and most charming are the long velvet or damask sleeves which match the dress in color and have soft fulls over the hand.

Many jaunty hats are decorated with striped ribbon. For instance, a seal brown plush sailor is trimmed with a novelty stripe ribbon in shades of brown, orange and red.

A Staple Medicine For All Families

From Infancy to Old Age a Reliable Family-Laxative is Most Needed—Try This One.

It is inconceivable in this day of general intelligence that any family would be without a simple remedy for the minor ills of life, for often by giving such a remedy in time a serious disease can be frustrated and a life saved.

For example, if at the first sign of a cold a simple laxative-remedy like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin were given the beginning of a serious lung affection or of a typhoid fever might be avoided. And also, in headaches, nervousness, etc., a small dose of this remedy would relieve the congestion and replace distress with comfort. Mothers give it to tiny infants and little children, and grown people take it with equally good effect.

Thousands of good American homes are never without it, among them the homes of Mrs. Martha Wilber, Vandalia, Ill., and Mrs. E. Crushon, 1110 7th Ave., Rock Island, Ill., who say they would as soon be without the necessities as without Syrup Pepsin. It saves the health of the family, and it saves doctor's bills. It is a guaranteed cure for any form of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, gas on the stomach, headaches, drowsiness after eating, etc. Have no hesitation about giving it to any member of the family, however young or old, for it contains nothing injurious to the youngest person.

A bottle can be obtained at any nearby drug store for fifty cents, or one dollar. The latter size is more economical and is bought by those who have already convinced themselves of its merits. Syrup Pepsin users learn to discard pills, salts, cathartics and purgatives generally as they are too great a shock to any average system.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 413 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

RAILROADS PROTEST AT MAIL STATEMENT

Declare That They Have Not Received Sufficient Remuneration for Government Service.

In a statement to the public, the railroads of the country contend that the postmaster general in arriving at his declaration that the railroads were getting an excess profit of $9,000,000 in mail pay, underestimated the annual mail expenses and taxes of the railroads by at least $6,000,000. The roads also claim that he ignored entirely the necessary return on the value of railroad property.

The Committee on Railway Mail Pay, which represents the 238 lines, is composed of Ralph E. Keiser, chairman, president of the Long Island railroad; Charles A. Wickstrom, president and general manager, Western Railway of Alabama; W. W. Baldwin, vice-president, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad; W. W. Atterbury, vice-president, Pennsylvania railroad; George T. Nicholson, vice-president, Atchafalaya, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad; E. J. Pearson, first vice-president, Missouri Pacific railroad; E. G. Buckland, vice-president, New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad; C. P. Daly, vice-president New York Central Lines; W. A. Worthington, assistant director of Maintenance and operation of the Union and Southern Pacific systems; W. E. Allen, secretary; and H. T. Newcomb, statistician.

This committee is making a vigorous answer to the postmaster-general's assertion that American railroads get too much money for handling mails. The carriers claim that they are grossly underpaid.

The railroads' statement made public today was as follows: "Having obtained certain estimates of the cost of the passenger train services, considered together by methods producing the lowest results, the next step shown in the postmaster general's report (Document No. 105) was to apportion a part of this cost to the mail service. The accepted method for such an apportionment is to distribute the total cost in proportion to the train space required by each of the respective services. The postmaster general obtained from the railroads statements which he might have used in applying this method and these statements showed that 9.32 per cent of the total space in passenger trains was required by the mails, but instead of using the data showing this fact, he substituted figures of his own which reduced the space credited to the mail service to 7.16 per cent of the total. The total of passenger train costs which the postmaster general estimates should be apportioned among passengers, express and mail on the basis of space occupied, was $37,074,172. He therefore assigned to the mail service 7.16 per cent of the last-named sum, or $2,654,510.69. If, however, he had used the proportion of space, 9.32 per cent, resulting from the reports he had obtained from the railroads, the amount apportioned as cost of the mail service for the month would have been $308,809 greater. Multiplying this by twelve gives an increase in the estimated annual cost of over $3,806,000.

"This examination of his methods shows that the determination of space was of primary and controlling importance and that the changes in space allotment have destroyed the value of his deductions. These changes were due to the postmaster general's refusal to assign to the mail service the working space and temporarily unoccupied space on trains, which were necessary to the mail service and to his actually assigning much of this space to the passenger service rendered on the same trains. "It is scarcely necessary to note that all kinds of traffic require 'working space' in addition to the space actually occupied by the traffic itself, and that this is especially true of the mail traffic, or that where there is a preponderant movement of a certain traffic in one direction there must be some empty space on account of that traffic, sometimes called 'dead space' in trains moving in the direction of lighter traffic. Thus passenger cars must have aisles, vestibules, and platforms, and postal cars must have a great deal of space in which to sort the mails, while, for mail carried in baggage cars, there must be space in which to reach the pouches and to receive and deliver them through the doors. A through train must also have the full capacity required for the maximum traffic of any kind likely to seek accommodation on any part of its journey, although during much of each trip the actual traffic may be considerably below this limit. The postmaster general, however, refused to credit the mail service with much of the space thus required by the Department, although his figures for the other passenger train services allowed fully for all such space required by them. In fact, in many cases, such space actually required by the mails, and so reported by the railroads, was taken from the total mail space and, without reason, assigned to the passenger service."

Higher education is a recent product, and the higher it gets the more it costs. The university is a place where money is accepted in return for nothing. You can always tell how deep the polish is when the young man returns home with eyesight so impaired from trying to locate the 45-yard line that he can't recognize work in any form. A university degree is a good thing, but it doesn't put any vegetables in the cellar unless it is hooked up to a steady job.

Some people go to college and get so much education that they don't know anything. One of the saddest sights on the Yale campus is a lecture-eared student who can translate Virgil sitting down or standing up, but who doesn't know whether Oscar A. Underwood lived B. C. or A. D. There is such a thing as getting so much education that the local liveryman has to instruct you how to mark your hallo!

Nobody can have too much education if it is aimed in the right direction. The trouble is that too much of it is aimed at the biceps and not enough at the head.

EDUCATION

(By Howard L. Rahn.)

EDUCATION is the art of mixing Greek roots with the foot ball course and producing college graduates who can cope with anything but a single-entry ledger. It is an expensive process, and some boys never get anything out of it except the correct idea of how to aim a goal kick.

Our forefathers had very little education and couldn't tell a squash from any other agricultural implement. They were deprived of the advantages of the indoor base ball, bull dog pipes swimming pools, knee-sprung violas and other forms of mental training, and they did most of their post-graduate work with hushing gloves. The average forefather didn't even know how to throw a spit ball. About all he learned was how to support a family of twelve children on 30 acres of Vermont sandstone and save enough to send his daughters to a New York finishing school.

Higher education is a recent product, and the higher it gets the more it costs. The university is a place where money is accepted in return for nothing. Some people go to college and get so much education that they don't know anything. One of the saddest sights on the Yale campus is a lecture-eared student who can translate Virgil sitting down or standing up, but who doesn't know whether Oscar A. Underwood lived B. C. or A. D. There is such a thing as getting so much education that the local liveryman has to instruct you how to mark your hallo!

Nobody can have too much education if it is aimed in the right direction. The trouble is that too much of it is aimed at the biceps and not enough at the head.

A New Christmas Club

HAVE you heard of the new kind of Christmas Club?" asked the debutante, joining the group around the tea-table.

"Goodness gracious, no! I didn't suppose there was anything new in the way of clubs under the sun. And the idea of starting a club just before Christmas!"

"That's the time to start this club," replied the debutante, "for it only holds sessions during the Christmas season."

"Nobody wants to attend club meetings at Christmas time," objected one of the tea-drinkers.

"Yes, you do, this kind of club."

"Tell us about it."

"It's a club to help the poor, but in a different way from usual, instead of your giving money or clothes or food to an organization, and a committee taking these things to the poor, the club gets the names of people who need things, and you are given a name, and you do the rest. See? It brings the personal touch into Christmas giving for the poor, that is so much better than the cold, charity flavor."

"I guess it would be a touch," said one of the tea-drinkers cynically.

"Just let some shiftless, wheedling family get hold of a sympathetic, inexperienced person, and what they would do to him would be a plenty."

The crowd laughed.

"Well, you don't have to join, if you don't want to," said the debutante tartly.

"But there are lots of people who would much rather go and help the poor themselves than merely send money. But they do not know where to go or who is really deserving. But if such people will send their name to the Club, the address of a family or needy person will be sent them, and they can get in touch with the one needing help. You've no idea how much one really enjoys going right to the house and seeing the people and finding out what they want. And you've no idea the strange developments that grow out of it. Somehow the poor open their hearts to a person who comes this way, more than they do to a committee, or some one sent from a charitable association. They feel the personal interest that is being taken, and they respond. Of course, the Club doesn't expect people with families or who are awfully busy to join it; though of course, they are welcome. It is intended more for solitary individuals who haven't much to do Christmas, and very little in hand for Christmas Day itself. And for such people, it really puts a lot into Christmas Day to have a family like this to look after."

"It is rather a good idea," said one of the group. "Seems to me one would get very much interested in a family or person he helped in that way. And it would mean more to them than just to have some food or clothes dumped upon them, by somebody who had a dozen others to look after, and was in a hurry."

"Let me put your name down," said the debutante, "as special Christmas caretaker for one person."

"You may," replied the woman smiling. "I think I shall thoroughly enjoy it. I am curious already to know what my Christmas charity package will be like."

"You'll get it two days before Christmas," said the debutante. "That gives you a day to see what is needed, and Christmas to take the things. It isn't intended to be a long-drawn out ordeal, unless you wish to make it so. It is just meant you shall take them what cheer you can Christmas Day. But of course, most people like to go see what is needed."

"Who knows what geniuses or martyrs I may discover," exclaimed the woman. "I am very anxious to meet my Christmas charge."

Luncheon Soup.

WE SOW the globe, we reap the corn.
We build the house where we may rest;
And then, at moments, suddenly,
We look up to the great wide sky,
Inquiring wherefore we were born—
For earnest or for jest?

DAINTY DISH FROM LITTLE BITS.

When a large amount of bread has been sliced, do not allow it to dry out, but pack in a jar and cover with a cloth wrung quite dry out of hot water, then place a plate over them and the bread will keep fresh. Sandwiches may be made and served at luncheon or supper and are always a welcome addition to the meal.

If you have a bit of boiled frosting left, and a few nuts and chopped raisins and drop on wafers. Bake in a hot oven until brown. These are nice with a salad.

Fondant left from French candies will keep indefinitely if kept in a covered dish, and may be melted over water and used for cake icings.

A few tablespoonsful of preserves may be used as a garnish for fruit salad, like pear or apple. Or it may be used as a filling for tarts, having more than one kind to use up odd bits.

A custard or chocolate ice cream may be used as a sauce for pudding if used within a short time.

Dainty pies may be made from leftover pie crust in the form of turnovers, of which children are very fond, or baked in gem pans and made like a grown-up upie.

Take your convalescing friend a baked apple prepared thus: Wash and wipe the apple but do not peel, scoop out the core with an apple corer, beginning at the blossom end but do not make a hole way through for the small well is to hold a bit of butter, a tablespoonful of sugar and a grating of nutmeg or a bit of lemon peel. Surround with water if the apples are not juicy, and bake until thoroughly tender. Apples that do not keep their shape during baking are not so attractive baked in this manner.

Left-over icing or fondant, when making candy, the scrapings of the bowls, can be used to stuff dates.

WATERMELON.

Many people seem to think that watermelon is indigestible. This is because they have been in the habit of eating a slice of watermelon with meat, beans, and other heavy foods, with which it is incompatible. Eaten with fruit or vegetables with which it harmonizes, it is very easily digested, and entirely wholesome. It is 90 per cent. water, purer than the best distilled water, and from 8 to 12 per cent. sugar, a sugar that is superior to any other except that of the grape. Many persons in apparent good health, as well as those who are admittedly sick, would be greatly benefited by a watermelon mono-diet for from two to ten days. Especially in arterio-sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, is such a diet particularly beneficial. One who has been eating an extravagant mixed diet finds it difficult at first to subsist on watermelon alone, but by adapting to it gradually it will be found satisfying, and, in very hot weather, particularly agreeable. Such a special diet is, in many cases, better than an absolute fast, although, like fasting, it needs to be judiciously regulated.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE INDEFINITE INVITATION.

APPARENTLY she is the most cordial person in the world. A stranger who heard her gushing and effusing over you would certainly say so. But you—and all the people who really know her—know better. You know just how big a discount to make in reckoning the value of her effusions. And you invariably make it.

And who is she, you ask? What, did I forget to tell you? Why, she is the lady of the indefinite invitations.

She is the person who always wants her friends to visit her some day, but never invites them Monday or Tuesday or Wednesday, or any of the rest of the seven definite days.

She is so glad to see you, she was thinking about you this very morning, and she does wish you would come out and see her some day. It's so lovely out where she lives and she knows you would enjoy the view from the veranda. You certainly must come some day, she says, and then she squeezes your hand and bids you goodbye and flutters away, evidently vastly delighted with herself and the impression of cordiality and hospitality that she thinks she has given.

But if you are acquainted with her type, she hasn't left it.

You know that her vague invitations mean just about as much as her protestations of affection, and you would as soon think of acting on one as the other.

Probably the next time she sees you she will tell you again how glad she is to see you and how she was thinking of you that very morning, and will ask plaintively, "Why haven't you ever come out to see me? I'm always asking and you never come."

And probably, being a coward, you will murmur some vague excuse, instead of calling her bluff by saying, "You never really asked me."

"Now, do use my automobile any time you like," is the favorite remark of a friend of mine. It sounds good, but being armed with the knowledge that any time is usually no time, I don't make the mistake of taking her at her word.

"I wish you would come in some day and help yourself to some of our grapes," was another kind friend's way of showing her generosity, but somehow she never suggested that we do it today, or even tomorrow.

Indefinite, meaningless invitations and promises are the counterfeit coin of hospitality and generosity. Fortunately, however, they deceive few. The only great harm they do is to those who try to use them for the real thing.

No sensible person resents it when any of their acquaintances do not effuse to invite them to dinner or loan them their automobiles, but any sensible person does dislike to have their acquaintances ply them with counterfeit cordiality and hospitality.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS
BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am 19, and sometimes wonder if I shall ever find the "right man." I have many opportunities to go with desirable young men, but they do not appeal to me. Lately I have given up going with them and spend all my time at home. Until I find my ideal man I cannot be contented. Am I doing right by not going with anyone and do you suppose there is a man in this world who will come up to my ideal of a man?

(2) Is it wrong to love a young man who has been separated from his wife for two years, but never let him know it and never give him any encouragement, yet be the best of friends? I would dislike to discontinue his friendship for he comes so near my ideal of a man. Then, too, he has never given me excuse to do so, though I know he is very fond of me.

(3) Which is correct—to take bread with your fork or your fingers?

(1) It is better for a girl not to marry than to marry any but the "right man" to her. But it is not good for a girl to put away all masculine society. Be friendly with the men, let them take you out occasionally, entertain them when you can and some day you'll find the one nearest your ideal. (2) My dear, this is the real cause of your giving up other masculine society. Don't make the mistake of building your hopes on a married man. Don't allow him to fill your life. It means sure unhappiness. You are a good girl now. Keep good even in your inmost thoughts, and be worthy of that "right man" even if you never meet him this side of heaven.

(3) With the fingers.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am 20 years old and have been keeping company with a gentleman for several months. He says he loves me better than any girl he ever went with, but I think he loves another girl, as he seems rather interested in her affairs. I like him very much. Please advise me what to do. (2) What is a good chocolate fudge recipe? (3) Are Pony coats worn this season.

(1) A man doesn't always love a girl because he is interested in her affairs. He probably means what he tells you. But don't like him too much. Let him ask you to marry him before you decide that he is the only man in the world for you.

(2) Chocolate Fudge: 3 cups granulated sugar, 3 cups cream, 1/2 cup rich milk; bring to boiling point, then add 1 tablespoon butter and 5 tablespoons grated unsweetened chocolate. Let boil just 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Then remove from fire, add 1 tablespoon extract vanilla (or almond), stir until creamy, pour into buttered plates to cool. (3) Yes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I wish to remodel. Do you think it would be pretty trimmed in black ratine and cream lace? (2) Please tell me how to remove mildew stains. L. R. W.

(1) I should think the combination might be made very nicely. (2) Mildew is very old is probably cannot be removed. Soak the stained part in a weak solution of chloride of lime, taking out any rinsing at short intervals until stain is gone. It is a slow process.

The Way to a Man's Heart

THE mere aroma of this good pudding greeting a tired man as he returns home from business, will bring smiles to his face and banish all thought of fatigue or lack of appetite.

WILBURCOCOA Bread Pudding

3/4 cup Wilburcocoa, 4 cups milk, 1/2 cups brown sugar, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon butter, 1 tablespoon unsifted flour, 5 thin slices bread, all crust removed.

Mix the Wilburcocoa with the cold milk until smooth, add one-half the brown sugar and the salt, then pour into a buttered dish and bake in a moderate oven for one hour. Beat the yolks of eggs until dry, add one tablespoon granulated sugar, spread over the top of pudding, rough with fork and dust with pulverized sugar; put in cool oven five minutes or until light brown.

Wilburcocoa makes many dainty desserts, cakes, candies and puddings that are wholesome, easily prepared and of great food value. "Cooks' Great Through Wilburcocoa" tells you how. Get it from your grocer who sells Wilburcocoa, or write us for a copy.

USE WILBURCOCOA

having removed seeds), add to cabbage; salt. Make dressing of one cup vinegar, half cup sugar; stir until dissolved, then add half cup rich cream. Nut meats can be added when served.

BOILED SALAD DRESSING—One teaspoon dry mustard, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar, one tablespoon flour, pinch cayenne pepper (not necessary), one cup milk, one cup vinegar, two whites of eggs, small piece butter. Mix mustard, salt, flour, sugar and pepper together. Beat whites, then stir in, next milk, then vinegar. Heat vinegar a little, so as not to curdle. Last, add small piece of butter. Cook in double boiler until it thickens. Pour in glass jar when cooked and it will keep in cold place for a few weeks. When ready to use, thin with a little milk or cream. Can be used for any salad.

Things Worth Knowing.
WHEN ROASTING meat in which there is no pocket for dressing, take a clean salt sack, wet, to prevent sticking, fill with dressing, tie and roast with meat. In this way the dressing has the same flavor as if roasted in a pocket.

A GLASS BUTTER PLATE is much nicer than china, since the butter will not adhere so readily.

WHEN WASHING LINOLEUM, add a tablespoonful of kerosene to the water; it will brighten linoleum until it looks like new.

Candies.
Cough Candy—An excellent cough candy is made of slippery elm, flaxseed and sugar. Soak a gill of whole flaxseed in half pint boiling water. In another dish put cupful of broken bits of slippery elm and cover with also with boiling water. Let these stand for two hours. Then strain both through muslin cloth into saucepan containing 1-2 pounds granulated sugar. Extract all the liquors you can, stir sugar until it is melted, then boil it until it turns to candy. Pour it out at once, when it reaches this point, on to greased papers.

This is the old-fashioned rule. The candy is more palatable if the juice of two lemons is added to it after it has cooked for 40 minutes.

Butter Scotch—One cup sugar, one cup molasses, half cup butter; boil until it hardens when dropped in cold water, then pour in a greased pan. Some put peanuts in the pan before turning in the candy.

Peanut Candy—One cup molasses, half cup butter, one cup peanuts (shelled); boil 10 minutes; add peanuts just before you take it from fire. Put in buttered pan and when cool cut in squares.

Cocoanut Candy—Take white meat of cocoanut, grate coarse until you have one-half pound; dissolve half pound refined sugar in two tablespoons water; put it over fire and as soon as it boils stir cocoanut in. Stir until boiled to a flake; pour into buttered pan or on marble slab; then cut in forms to suit, when nearly cold.

Cocoanut Candy—One cup desiccated cocoanut; pour in enough sweetened cocoanut; pour in enough sweet milk to cover cocoanut; let soak while other ingredients are cooking; one cup molasses, one cup sugar, butter size of an egg and one tablespoon vinegar; boil about 15 minutes and put in cocoanut and milk. Watch carefully after putting in cocoanut, as it will scorch very quickly; if you do not stir it. Cook until brittle, when dropped in water. Pour in a buttered tin and set away to cool.

Salt a Bathroom Cleanser.
The bathtub and bowl, and also other pieces of enameled ware and crockery, may be satisfactorily cleaned with common salt used on a slightly dampened piece of flannel. This removes dirt and stains without scratching the surface.—Housekeeper.

Explained.
Dick—"What part of the family tree am I, muzz?" Mother—"I guess you are one of the limbs, Dick." Dick—"Do you suppose that's what dad meant that morning when he said that I ought to be trimmed about every so often?"—Judge.

Lady Baltimore Cake

The Most Popular Cake This Season
By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine

This is considered by many cooking authorities the finest cake that can be made, though in reality it is not at all difficult.

K C Lady Baltimore Cake
One cup butter; 2 cups granulated sugar; 2 cup milk; 1 teaspoonful rose water; 3/4 cups flour; 3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder; whites of 6 eggs, beaten dry.

Cream the butter and beat in the sugar gradually. Sift together, three times the flour and baking powder, and add to the butter and sugar, alternately with the milk and rose water. Lastly, add the egg whites. Bake in three-layer cake pans. Put the layers together with the following frosting.

Frosting for Lady Baltimore Cake
Three cups granulated sugar; 1 cup boiling water; whites of 5 eggs; 1 cup chopped raisins; 1 cup chopped walnuts; 5 eggs cut in thin slices.

Stir the sugar and water until the sugar is dissolved, then let boil without stirring until the syrup from a spoon will spin a long thread, pour upon the whites of the eggs, beaten dry, beating constantly meanwhile. Continue the beating until the frosting is cold; add the fruit and spread upon the cake.

The K C Cook's Book contains ninety just such delicious recipes—bread, muffins, cakes and pastry. You can secure a copy free by sending the certificate pocket in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder to the Jacobs Mrs. Co., Chicago. Small cans do not contain Cook's Book certificates.

Domestic Science DEPARTMENT
CONDUCTED BY Mrs. Alice Gitchell Kirk

Nuts and cheese both have great food value. They also have the advantage of being liked by almost every one, young and old, and give greater variety in our menus. Some one has said, "The tendency of the housekeeper is to fall into ruts and we all know that ruts, whether for carriages, automobiles or for the wheels of our brains, are easy to get into but hard to get out of."

Both of the mentioned foods have good keeping qualities and are always ready for emergencies. Nuts are found in some variety in nearly every part of the world, so it does seem as though the all-wise Providence planned that they should be used for food, from the inexpensive peanut to the higher priced ones. Cheese, like nuts, has the reputation of being hard to digest. There are two reasons for this; they are either eaten when no more food is needed, or not properly masticated.

Results of experiments tried by the U. S. Department of Agriculture lead us to believe that cheese compares favorably with other foods in nutrition and does not differ materially in case of digestion from the same amount of meat. Often disturbances are caused by poor cooking and not by the composition of this particular food. Use the same precaution as in cooking eggs, and cook over boiling water when possible.

Note—All measurements level. Flour sifted before measuring. T=teaspoonful; tsp.—teaspoonful; c=cup.

Rice and Cheese Fondue
Materials—Milk, 1 c.; boiled rice, 1 c.; cheese 1-2 c.; butter, 1 t.; salt, 1-2 tsp.; paprika, 1-4 tsp.; cayenne; egg, 1.

Directions—Heat the milk in the double boiler and add all the ingredients, the cheese cut in small bits, and the egg beaten light. Pour into a buttered pudding dish, stand in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven over thirty minutes. If the oven is too hot it will surely fall.

Utensils—Measuring cup, tablespoon, teaspoon, double boiler, egg beater, bowl, pudding dish.

Hard times will come ere very long, some prophets do affirm; soon things will be going wrong, and grief will make us squirm. The seas may all be off their base, as they have been before; they like to scare the human race, and make us sad and sore. And then, again, they may be right, their guesses may come true; if panics put us in a plight, 'twill be a howdydo!

So let's be hoping ahead, I sometimes think when I am sane, free from my keeper's care, a panic would not be in vain, even though it brought despair. For in these fat and golden years we cease to value cash; we go in debt up to our ears for every kind of trash. We buy a thousand foolish things, we earn have wings and fly to beat the larks. Perhaps we'd learn to value wealth and try to save the price if panic came on us by stealth, and slugged us once or twice.

HARD TIMES for the best while fixing for the worst, and do our daily stunts with zest till our suspenders burst. Let's put in brine the useful seeds for which we work with haste, economize as did our dads, and cut out foolish waste. It will not hurt us to believe that panics will arrive; the more of savings we achieve, the more we all will thrive. And if the panics do not come, but better times instead, if things keep up their busy hum, we'll be that much ahead.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Dec. 6, 1872.—Fatal Cases of Epizooty: There is no occasion for concealing the fact that horses are dying in the county from epizooty. The number of fatal cases is not large enough to cause any general feeling of alarm, but it is of sufficient magnitude to admonish horse owners to be not hasty in working their convalescing animals.

Party Last Night: The party given by Miss Emma Shelton, at her residence on South Main street, last night, was attended by a large number of the devotees of fashion and Tensichore. Miss Shelton was profuse with her invitations, being an old resident of the city and generally acquainted, and the responses filled the house with happy guests. The occasion was highly enjoyed by the participants.

Rev. M. Jones' Lecture: The course of lectures to the young, by the Rev. Jenk. L. Jones at All Souls' church have been well attended, and were highly spoken of. The third lecture of the course will be given next Sunday evening. Subject: "Amusements."

Brief Items: Hay and straw have doubled in price since the epizooty disabled farmers' horses.

The First M. E. church will be dedicated next Thursday, Rev. Dr. Fowler, president of the Northwestern university, Chicago, presiding.

December 6

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY
You are fortunate, and pleasant days with friends and general prosperity are in store for you. Cupid will influence you strongly.

Those born today will be fortunate in many ways. They will gain by inheritance, and influential friends will help them forward. Added to this, a restless ambition will carry many of them to the crest of success.

THE DAILY NOVELETTE

The Duke de Dewkley

(Synopsis of preceding chapters: The streets of Paris are running blood and French swear words, for the French Revolution is on. Especially is the blood running outside the mansion of the Duke de Dewkley, for the Duke has oppressed the poor people like anything. He had repeatedly run them down in the streets with his crested carriage and then contemptuously thrown them trading stamps to pay for the damage. And now the worms had turned! The mob clamored about the palace of the covering Duke, shouting, "A bas le big stiff! Vive les common peep!" Pats de fois grast! French bricks crashed through French plate windows. Horrid oaths and the sound of splintering glass filled the air. The doomed Duke seemed dammed, vice versa.

Finally the storm broke out anew—the Duke de Dewkley had flung open his bedroom window and was standing on the balcony, holding up a wrist and one hand for silence. When the silence had been brought the Duke began to speak in perfect French.)

Chapter 666G

The famous nobleman's aquiline nose stood clear against the French sky and his dull voice rang out sharply.

"Friends," he said, "would you be the guys to take ease out of Parisian?"

The mob laughed and dispersed, for the old villain had tickled its sense of humor. So they did not go to bed until two days later.

(The End.)

DINNER STORIES

The young man produced a small, square box from his pocket.

"I have a present for you," he began. "I don't know whether it will fit your finger or not, but—"

"Oh, George!" she broke in, "this is so sudden! Why I never dreamed—"

But just then George produced the gift—a silver thimble—and it got suddenly cooler in the room.

Jim Brent, ex-sheriff of Lincoln County, New Mexico, told this story to Emerson Hough.

Back yonder in the free-silver days Brent had a friend who had raised a grizzly from a cub and had trained the big brute to saddle. He used to ride the bear on prospecting trips. One day the prospector was riding up an arroyo when he ran plump into a band of six full-grown and untamed silver-tip bears—enormous fellows—and they all showed fight.

The prospector dismounted from his tame bear, unslinging his trusty rifle, and after a terrific battle six bears, one after another, bit the dust. Then he mounted his own bear and proceeded on his way, but he hadn't ridden more than a mile when he noticed a peculiarity in the stride.

"Sure you're here, Hough," said Brent, "he had killed his own grizzly and was riding one of the wild ones home!"

When the waiters struck in New York seventy of the seventy-five cooks employed at the Waldorf-Astoria went out. This left the kitchen rather inadequately manned and the maitre d'hotel hurried downstairs to see what could be done.

He found one of the five faithful ones ready for business:

"You will remain?" asked the maitre d'hotel.

"Yes."

The wagon men and delivery boys say:

DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING NOW!

"The few days before Christmas we're nearly worked to death. Everybody wants everything at once. We're driving and delivering in the few hours of sleep we do get, so it's no wonder mistakes and accidents happen."

"Right now the autos and wagons could carry heavier loads—if people did more shopping now the superintendents of delivery could equalize the work and loads."

Will you do your share to make Christmas mean what it should to salespeople, packers, shippers, wagonmen, and delivery boys?

Thank you!

HIS RISE TO POWER

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER.

Author of "The Man Higher Up"

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

On the next Saturday morning James Sheehan, found guilty of conspiracy to bar and sentenced to four months "hard labor" in the county workhouse. But before the appeal which he took had been refused by the higher court he had left Benton county for parts unknown.

John sought refuge in the "cubbyhole" that Benton county provides for its district attorneys. With a sense of relief he fled away in his notes on the Sheehan case in a cabinet marked "Finished Business." Then he threw himself into a chair and began to take stock.

Sheehan's eyes haunted him. John was a normal young man, and he was capable of knowing the joy of a task well done. But not this sort of task! He could find no elation in a triumph won at the cost of direct personal misery to others.

There was Slayton, for example, a handsome, pleasant young man who looked the criminal not at all. He had not had the courage to stand trial, and he had broken bail and fled, leaving a sick wife. She and the child born since the father's flight now lay together in a grave. Slayton had not dared to return. Perhaps he did not even know of the double tragedy.

In his dreams John often saw Slayton's hunted face as it must now appear. He became conscious that his head was aching, that he was tired all over, every nerve in his body throbbing. For more than six months, ever since his election, he had been working incessantly, feverishly toward this day. The release from strain allowed his malnourished, protesting body to be heard. He got up and left the office, as though feeling from the problem.

He laid a roundabout course away from Main street out into the country. He tramped determinedly along the pike, filling his lungs with the tonic air. It had been a good "growing season." His way took him between fields of clean young corn and barley and oats and occasional cool, green wood lots.

A farmer, driving a pair of heavy farm horses doing duty at the tongue of a squeaky spring wagon, rattled up behind him.

"Howdy, John! Want a lift?" "Howdy, Rill! No, thank you. Just taking a little exercise and soaking in all this."

Cranshaw reined in his team. John stopped.

"Little mite too smart for 'em today, weren't ye?" "They had been so bold, they made it easier."

Cranshaw nodded. "Be smarter next time, I reckon—I've give 'em a chance. I've give 'em a chance," he repeated. "Us farmers, we're feelin' matic-Pains, ect., by using MUIKE we didn't make any mistake last OLE, the clean, white ointment!"

With oil of mustard. "Murchell says you forget," John said. "Be'n at ye a'ready, has he?" Cranshaw asked shrewdly. "He'll be at ye harder, before ye're through. Ye better be scared. Mobby we'll fergit an' then mebbe we won't. But I guess gah, Sprains, Bruises, Stiff Neck, ect., are concerned, all ye got to do is go and an' try to finish up the job ye've started. I've don't do our part, I jars and a special large hospital— we won't have nobody to blame ourselves."

Accept no substitute. If your question is, am I big enough to the Musterole Company, Cleveland, Ohio, and we will mail you a postage prepaid.

"Musterole is the greatest thing that can't be answered till ye've for a lame back. It has helped more than anything I've ever used, and it's a job because it's big."

J. E. West, Catawba Island, Ohio, is ye goin' to keep up what ye've done? 'If ye don't, there ain't no else to do it. An' we'll soon be where we started."

nodded slowly. Cranshaw did use the point.

See Steve Hampden's back," he said casually. "That girl of his the trial. Came in late an' had by the door, where I was standin'. She was with some young city feller. See her at the rally last fall too. She seems," he grinned quizzically, "to take considerable interest in ye. So long!"

Soon he was out of sight around a turn in the road.

John swung rapidly along for an hour until the sweat oozed from every pore of his body. Then he threw himself under a tree by the roadside.

He pondered his problem. Yet he knew that it was answered, not by Cranshaw's homely wisdom, but by the inscrutable purpose of the force which had impelled him into the fight. He could not withdraw from the task to which he had been set. Whither? was a question that he needed not to answer, so long as a straight piece of road lay ahead. He thought sadly of his father's displeasure. And he thought of Katherine, whom it appeared, the winter had not taught to forget him. He had not learned to forget. Work could dull it, could not wholly stifle the longing for her. And yet he had not been unhappy. He knew that he could not say no to that which was calling him into service.

He walked home through the calm of sundown. At the corner where stands the Farmers' bank he met Warren Blake and a companion. Warren stopped him to introduce the stranger, Haig, a lanky, cadaverous individual who was the author of a much criticized novel, "The Brethren."

"I heard you twisting Murchell's tail this afternoon," Haig drawled. "If you don't mind, I'd like to congratulate you—on your nerve. I've been wondering whether you are merely a brave man or a specimen of that splendid genus, the fool. Brother Blake inclines to the latter notion."

"Yes, Warren would," John smiled. "I do," said Warren solemnly. "I don't believe in agitation. It hurts business—and the agitator."

"In New Chelsea, Mr. Haig, we daily offer thanks for prosperity, good weather and the old party."

Haig's ready grin broadened as he placed a hand on Warren's shoulder. "Here, Mr. Dunmeade, but for the grace of God, stand I. My people wanted to make me a banker."

"A dollar, Mr. Haig," John put in, "held close enough to the eye will hide the rest of creation."

Haig chuckled. "Now, that's good. That's very good. Wish I could have thought of it."

"As we put it in New Chelsea, are you leaving soon, Mr. Haig?" asked John.

"Lord, no! I'm here for my health. Doctor told me I'd been working too hard or not hard enough. I forget which, and I needed fresh air for my liver. So I trailed up here after the Hampdens, where, by the way, Brother Blake and I are dining this evening."

"Yes, and we'd better start," Warren suggested impatiently.

"Ah, those fiery lovers! Come around and see me, Mr. Dunmeade."

John promised, and they parted. He reached home to be soundly scolded by Miss Roberta for his tardiness at supper. After supper he strolled into the library. The judge was reading by the desk, the light from the lamp throwing his cold, heavy features into sharp relief. He looked up inhospitably as John entered.

"Busy, judge?" John generally called him judge, feeling not without reason that his father took more pride in his office than in his paternity. Of late he had had especial reason for this belief.

"Not too busy if you have anything of importance to discuss. I suppose you expect me to put you on the back because you've sent another man on the road to prison?"

"I have felt that you weren't in full sympathy with it."

"I am not." The judge laid his book on the desk and sat stiffly erect. John was immediately enabled to sympathize with those unfortunate who were arraigned before his father.

"Now that the case is ended, I may speak frankly. As a judge I, of course, approve of the punishment of crime. But I don't approve your going out of your way to attack your party and Senator Murchell, a fine, clean living gentleman, who has always showed the warmest friendship for your family."

Judge Dunmeade spoke with restrained emphasis.

"And has created a pernicious machine," John added incautiously.

"Which elected you to the office you now hold."

"Your memory isn't good, judge. The machine nominated me. The people of Benton county elected me, you may remember."

"You couldn't have been nominated without Murchell's indorsement."

"That, I'm sorry to say, is probably true," John said, wishing that he had not ventured into the room. "I'm sorry you feel so about it. Good night, father."

Judge Dunmeade resumed his book. Now, the judicial temperament is not given to impulse. But as John went slowly out of the room Judge Dunmeade experienced a novel sensation which in the brief moment allowed for reflection he was at loss to define. Later he decided that it was his generous nature asserting itself to give his son another chance. He may have been mistaken.

Be that as it may, before John had passed quite out of the room he was recalled by an unexpected "Wait!"

"He returned. 'Yes, father?'"

"I suppose," said the judge gruffly, "your father's interest can have no weight with you. It ought to be clear to you without suggestion from me that if you persist in attacking Senator Murchell you make my lifelong ambition impossible."

"Are you still taking that seriously?" The senator has been teasing you along with the promise of a justiceship for ten years. Don't you know by this time that he has no intention of giving it to you?"

"He gave you a nomination."

"Yes, he happened to believe he could make use of me. It seems to be solely a question of the senator's political necessities. I—I doubt that he needs you, father."

"That means, I presume," the judge said bitterly, "that I count for nothing against your notions? But I might have known it. Good night!" he repeated.

Out in the clear night John walked slowly about. More than ever he realized the price which they must pay who would be voices.

CHAPTER X. Apples of Eden.

IF the summer before had been gay, what shall we say of that which now opened? The center of gaiety was East ridge. The Italian villa was the scene of one continuous house party.

It was inevitable that John and Katherine should meet. It happened one morning a few days after the Sheehan trial when John was leaving the postoffice with his daily mail. A trap drew up in which sat Katherine and a young man. John remembered a saying of hers concerning one whom "people were apt to sneer at as a speculator," but whom she thought "splendid because he had had the brains and courage to make his own fight and win."

He had no difficulty in identifying that man with Gregg, of whom he had heard more than once. Gregg was an attractive fellow, a few years older than John, of athletic build and pleasant manner. He joined Katherine in congratulating John on his recently acquired fame.

"We expect to see you often on the ridge. There will be tennis. He will make you play," she said to Gregg, who responded pleasantly.

"I'd like to have the chance, Mr. Dunmeade. I've been hearing about your game."

But, although Gregg spent nearly every week end on the ridge, John did not keep his promise. Indeed, he had little time for recreation, and that little was put in with Haig, with whom he was rapidly cementing a friendship. The June primaries were at hand. John felt less pride than responsibility when he found that he was expected to lead the campaign to capture the county nominations from the machine and that, by tacit consent of friends and enemies alike, upon him devolved the task of choosing the reform ticket.

He gave much thought to this task. It was not simple. There were many unworthy gentlemen, he discovered, willing to be swept into office by the wave of popular protest. And he could have learned here, had he been so minded, that even a reformer must employ the wisdom of the serpent. He achieved results at which a politician might have sneered, but which were on the whole very promising in the light of his inexperience.

In Haig John found an unexpected but invaluable aid. The novelist had once been a political reporter. The reform ticket was nominated. Murchell, cynically willing to let the reform wave run its brief course, withheld his hand. Bereft of its familiar weapon, fraud, the machine was easily conquered by a people thoroughly angered. Even Plumville gave the reformers a small majority. Haig hailed John as a "little boss."

John indignantly rejected the title. "My work is done, or, at least, will be when they're elected. I can't interfere with them."

"Say, aren't you afraid the cows will take you for a bunch of nice, green, succulent clover? Just wait!" Haig grinned, "until they're in office. Make no mistake, sonny; you'll need to keep a tight rein on them. About a year from now I expect to see some pretty little, homemade illusions badly busted."

The promised journey to the ridge had not yet been made.

One afternoon Haig found him busy in his office. "How's the bosslet? Had a shave today? Feeling conversational? You and I are going out for a little drive this afternoon."

"We're not, I hope you are. I've got things to do."

"This American habit of industry is becoming a positive mania. Are you coming peacefully or will you go any-how?"

"I'll do neither," John continued his writing.

"All right," Haig seated himself, deposited his feet on the desk beside John and commenced an apparently interminable monologue on the apocryphal cleverness of a dog he once had owned.

John threw down his pen in disgust. "I surrender," he groaned. "I'll go to get rid of you."

"Thought I could persuade you. Come right along. I've got a buggy outside."

The Spring of 1908, I had a severe cough for six months, tried all the medicine that my doctors recommended to me, but no results came. I could hardly do anything. But, at last, James Deering, of Glasgow, Tenn., insisted that I try your medicine. In one week's time there was quite an improvement in my condition, and after I had taken several bottles, I felt as well as ever in my life."

"WE'VE JUST BEGUN TO FIGHT"—VESSEY

Gov. Robert S. Vessey.

"The Progressive party is not taking candidates. It now is engaged in organizing and discussing the principles for which it proposes to fight," says Gov. Robert S. Vessey of South Dakota, who last summer deserted the elephant for the bull moose.

"I never knew of a condition in any political party where after a defeat, there is so much enthusiasm and determination to organize thoroughly as there is in the Progressive party today."

"I have misused the word 'defeat,' however. We do not look upon the result at the polls as a defeat. We look at it as a big victory."

WEATHER NOT TO BLAME

It's Your Condition.

"This weather simply takes the life right out of me. I can hardly drag one foot after the other," said a rundown, tired-out woman, the other day.

"We want to say to every such person in this vicinity. Don't blame the weather. It's your condition. You need a strengthening tonic and the very best we know is Vinol which is a combination of the two most world-famous tonics, namely, the medicinal curative elements of cod liver oil and tonic iron, for the blood."

A case has just come to our attention from Vineland, N. J. Mrs. Allen T. Godfrey says: "I never fail to say a good word for Vinol, for it restored my strength and vigor after I had been in a badly run-down condition for several months. Every one who is broken in health ought to know that Vinol will build them up and make them strong."

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. Smith Drug Co., Janesville, Wis.

The Resurrection of Christ—Its Results

By REV. WILLIAM EVANS, D. D.,
Director of Bible Course of the Moody
Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT: I Cor. 15.

1. The resurrection of Christ was the seal of God's approval upon the truthfulness of the claims of Jesus.

The claims of Christ imply either divinity or blasphemy. Jesus Christ, in view of his claims, was either God or the most colossal fraud, or the greatest impostor that ever lived. His claims stand unequalled in the history of the human race, and on the absolute fulfillment, even to the very letter, of all these claims, Christ bases his right to divine recognition. He claimed that it was his prerogative to forgive sin; that he was the only way to God; that outside of him there was no peace and no way of access to the Father; that unless he was trusted and believed in with a whole heart there was absolutely no hope of seeing heaven; that he was the divinely appointed Redeemer of the world, and that the world's redemption and salvation depended absolutely upon him alone; that the power of life and death was in his hands; and that all the Old Testament predictions received their fulfillment in him. So strong were these claims that on one occasion the Jews were exasperated with him and said, "What sign showest thou us if thou be all that thou claimest to be?" In answer to this challenge, Christ referred to his resurrection and said, "If I do not rise again from the dead, do not believe my claim." On his resurrection, therefore, Jesus Christ based the vindication of all his claims—as Paul says, "He was declared to be the Son of God by his resurrection from the dead." So long as Christ's resurrection remains an accredited fact of history, then that Galilean peasant, Jesus of Nazareth, is indeed, and in truth the Son of the Most High God, and the Saviour of the world.

Christ's enemies realized the importance of Jesus' resurrection, and because of this, bribed the soldiers to say that the disciples came and stole away his body.

What a comfort the resurrection is to the believer, who has placed his hope and confidence in the life to come in Jesus Christ the Saviour of the world! The world may deride, and mock, and sneer, and ridicule, but the believer exclaims, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," and this is ample evidence that the believer's faith has not been misplaced.

If the resurrection of Christ is a guarantee of our own resurrection, Paul's thoughtful and inspired inference from Christ's resurrection is this: "Because he lives, we shall live also." In the words of Dr. Parker, the apostle is continually amplifying, "Place an acorn in his hand and immediately he feels the weight of a mighty oak. Give him one little bulb, and immediately you have touched the fountains of his eloquence, and he describes gardens and paradises and heavens. Paul saw the whole in the part—he saw our resurrection in Christ. If Christ rose from the dead, then the graveyard is not a permanent thing. The apostle will have every little child brought back. The resurrection shall be accompanied by a shout—does this shout intimate or signify the spirits leaving heaven and going to the graveyard claiming their bodies? Who knows?

Without the resurrection of Christ, there is no certainty of our own resurrection and that of our loved ones. If Christ be not risen then all who have died have perished eternally. Then we have no hope of seeing those who have gone before. But we have a better hope than that. "Because I live, ye shall live also." As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive. "For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised."

Firm and fast as the grave now seems to hold the bodies of our dear loved ones, it is now doomed as a fruit of Christ's resurrection, and will be compelled one day to relax its grasp, and yield them up to us again. Empty as was Joseph's sepulchre when the angel stood before it, so shall one day be every grave on earth, when another angel shall sound his trumpet and it shall ring through all the regions of the dead, and still all to life again.

III. The resurrection of Christ manifests his victory over death and the grave.

Up to this point we have had been under the impression that the effect of the resurrection was confined to the living.

The Child in the Midst. Matt. xviii: 1-14.

Golden Text—In heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven. Matt. xviii: 10.

(1.) Verse 1—What and where is the kingdom of heaven as Jesus taught?

(2.) What idea did the disciples have about the kingdom of heaven and its chief men?

(3.) Verses 2-3—In what respects did the disciples need to be converted?

(4.) From Jesus' estimate of a child, would you say that all children are members of the kingdom of heaven? Why?

(5.) In what respects are we to become like children in order to be saved?

(6.) Verse 4—Why does Jesus make humility the standard of greatness in his kingdom?

(7.) Verse 5—Why should Christ take a kindness done to a little child the same as if done to himself?

(8.) If one loves and tenderly cares for children why would that not constitute him a Christian?

(9.) Verse 6—What is the difference in the culpability of one who offends a child or an obscure person who believes in Jesus and one who does the same thing to a person who does not believe in Jesus?

(10.) Why is a sin against a child or any weak person deserving of such great punishment as Christ here intimates?

(11.) Verse 7—What are the most serious of the ways in which people "offend" other people?

(12.) Jesus states "it must needs be that offences come." But why is this so?

(13.) What is the "woe" to those who offend or hurt their fellow men?

(14.) Verses 8-9—What are some of the things which the average man desires most?

(15.) What is the most important thing in life?

(16.) What are life's chief temptations?

(17.) Verse 10—How are we liable to offend one of Christ's little ones?

(18.) What is the significance of the fact that the guardian angels of Christ's little ones are always looking into the face of God?

(19.) Verse 11—Who are the lost?

(20.) How does Jesus save those that are lost? (This is one of the questions that may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(21.) Verses 12-13—Why does a man rejoice more over finding one treasure that he had lost than over ninety and nine similar treasures he had kept safely?

(22.) Verse 14—It is God's wish that all shall be saved. Why, then, will all not be saved?

Wise Man.

Once upon a time a wise man penned a letter full of confidential statements, and at the end he wrote a line, heavily underscored: "Burn this letter." Then, being a wise man, he took his own advice and burned the letter himself.

Dog Earned His License.

The little fox terrier of L. N. Hanley won for his master a license tag for the killing of 100 rats. The prize was offered, when the canine had killed 80 in two weeks, by a member of the council.—Carlisle Advocate.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

JOHN DOE, CONVICT.

One of the pathetic stories used by the friends of Abe Ruef, the one time California boss, to secure his release from prison was this:

It is said that every night the old mother of Ruef goes to the bed occupied by the son in boyhood and "tucks him in" just as she did in the evenings long ago.

The story may or may not be true.

But—

It is a faithful picture of that motherly devotion that never forgets her "boy," that softens the hard words that may be spoken of him by his fellows, that condones his failures and forgives his sins.

There is only one thing in human relations that approaches the beauty of motherly love, and that is its recognition and return by the son.

In the Leavenworth (Kan.) prison is a man who is called John Doe.

That is not his right name, but under that name he was sent to prison for the burglary of a postoffice.

The man is suffering from cancer of the stomach, which is rapidly carrying him off, and he endures intense agony. He has no friends.

Or, if he has friends, he will not name them. In his condition a little effort by his friends would secure his release, and he might die out of prison. But, writhing on his cot, he refuses to tell. And for the reason that—"Mother might hear of it."

He knows that his mother's heart is sore enough as she wonders where her wandering boy may be and prays for news from him. To tell her he is a convict and dying from an incurable disease would kill her.

And so, crushing back the pain as he lies at the brink of death, the brave fellow will not betray himself lest he gives his mother pain.

And—

Somewhere a mother dreams and remembers a baby face, and then a tot in kilts, and later a boyish figure in knee breeches, and then a manly youth—he will always be a boy to her—and as she smiles or sighs or prays she never dreams that her boy is a convict.

And he?

Etch the picture in sordid outlines—an outcast dying in his iron cage—yet—

Whatever the sins of John Doe, convict, there's a lot of good in him.

Evident.

"This car," said the demonstrator, "is almost human. Perhaps you have noticed—" "Yes, I have," said Birks, dryly. "It reminds me of several men I know—been smoking ever since we left the garage, and the last hill we climbed it puffed like a porpoise. Haven't you something less human and more generally satisfactory?"—Harper's Weekly.

In His Line.

"He is building an immense artificial mountain on his country estate." "Well, I guess it comes sort of natural for him to put up a bluff."—Puck.

THREE COLD WAVES DURING THIS MONTH

Foster Predicts Severe Winter Weather for Latter Part of December.

Last Bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent Dec. 8 to 12, warm wave 7 to 11, cool wave 10 to 14. Warmer than usual, not much precipitation and generally moderate weather describes the disturbance.

The warm weather first half of December will tend to lower prices of grain, but holders should not be discouraged. Sell no grain or cotton in December. The big speculators have set the trap and producers are expected to run over each other in trying to get to market. Let the speculators trade with each other at the big markets where they have fallen into the habit of making prices. After those big fellows get all they can buy at the low prices they will want the prices to go up.

No one can foresee a general war in Europe and what such a war would do to prices of cotton can only be guessed at but the general feeling has been that Europe can not afford to go into a general war.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about Dec. 12, cross Pacific slope by close of 13, great central valleys 14 to 16, eastern sections 17. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Dec. 12, great central valleys 14, eastern sections 16. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Dec. 15, great central valleys 17, eastern sections 19.

West of meridian 90 the intensities of the weather features accompanying this disturbance will be moderate but as the storm center nears eastern sections the forces will increase and severe weather may be expected in large sections near the Atlantic coasts. At the same time another storm center will make severe weather on the Pacific coast.

We can not now determine which of three cool waves will be the most severe cold wave. One of them will be due to cross the continent Dec. 10 to 14, the second 15 to 19, and the third 20 to 24. The peculiar condition of planetary forces throws some doubt on this matter and although we have expected the great fall in temperature to come with the third cool wave we now suggest that you be prepared for each of the three. The fall of temperatures will be great and as it will be a sudden change from very warm to very cold it will pay to be prepared for it.

Fourth disturbance of December will reach Pacific coast about 17, cross Pacific slope by close of 18, great central valleys 19 to 21, eastern sections 22. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about Dec. 17, great central valleys 19, eastern sections 21. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about Dec. 20, great central valleys 22, eastern sections 24.

This will cause severe winter storms and severe weather from Pacific slope to eastern sections and will be followed by unusually cold weather. Not as much snow in northern sections and less than usual rain in south, than might be expected with a great winter storm. Last part of December is expected to average colder than usual and not much precipitation.

We are preparing to place our crop weather forecasts for 1913 before the world's greatest scientists and we propose to convince them against their will that the causes of our weather changes are known and that we now have the best system of forecasting ever devised. We can not get our latest improvements into the forecast work before January.

Half the world is on the wrong scent in the pursuit of happiness. They think it consists in having and getting and in being served by others. It consists in giving and serving others.—Henry Drummond.

If One Physician Could Relieve

RHEUMATISM

Sciatica and Neuritis

Should it become known that a physician here could RELIEVE EVERY CASE of rheumatism, sciatica and neuritis, the sufferers of this and surrounding cities would read his office.

One physician in New York—a specialist, as been able to do this—to RELIEVE PRACTICALLY EVERY CASE PRESENTING ITSELF TO HIM, with a prescription known as "NURITO." It is an ethical prescription and contains neither opiates nor narcotics, and is as proven itself in more than 45,000 cases to be a positive antidote for the uric acid in the system which causes rheumatism, sciatica and neuritis.

No dieting is necessary—on the contrary, you are recommended to eat your usual allotment of food. No matter how badly you are suffering, you will begin to feel the medicine work at once.

We are prepared to show you proofs, backed by affidavit. The physician who can relieve every case is not in this city in person. BUT THE MEDICINE THAT HE PRESCRIBES IS HERE.

"Nurito," which is in powder form, sells for $1 and $2 a box. To try it means to be cured—to replace pains and aches with enthusiasm for this advancement in medicine. Marital Chemical Co. Flatiron Bldg., New York, for sale by—
